

Scottish Mental Health Law Review

Terms of Reference for the Communication and Engagement Workstream – Easy Read

On March 19th 2019 it was decided by the Scottish Government that there would be a review of mental health law.

A review is when people look at the law and decide if it needs to change. You can find out more about this in the terms of reference for the review. You can access this by clicking on this link: Easy Read Terms of Reference

The group is made up of professionals who work with mental health law and people who have experienced being treated under mental health law or people who have cared for someone being treated under mental health law.

The group will make suggestions to the person in charge of the review on the best way of letting people know about the work of the review and how they can get involved to share their views and experiences on mental health law.

The group will also come up with ways of working to make sure that the review hear from as many people as possible. They will make sure that everybody, no matter what their background, or where they are from, feel like they can say what they think about mental health law.
